

As a result of the mid-year review of our response plans, UNICEF has revised its programme targets and funding needs for the second half of 2014. Below is a summary of results to date (January – June) against these revised targets as well as the updated funding requirements. UNICEF current funding gap for response plans inside Syria and in neighbouring countries is US$462.5m. Urgent support is required to bridge this gap so that UNICEF can continue to provide life-saving assistance to the children of Syria.
